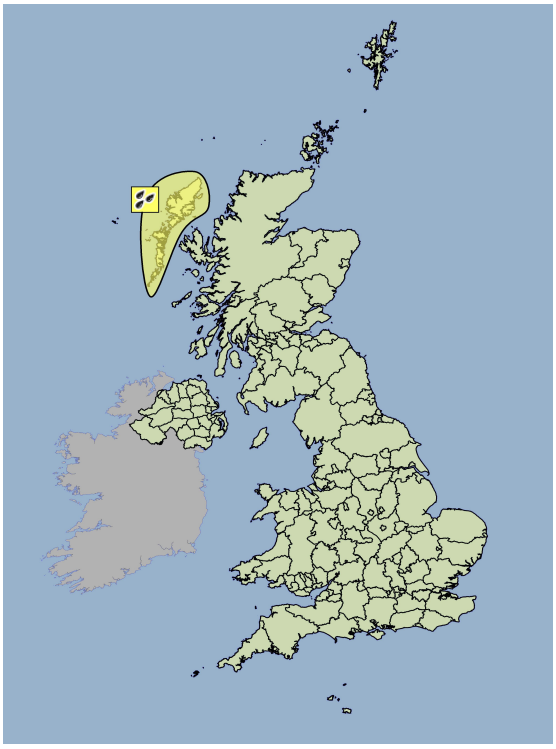
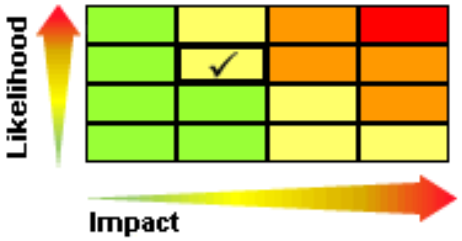
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An unseasonable depression will approach NW Scotland on Friday and is expected to bring more than 20 mm of rain to the Western Isles. Given high soil moisture levels, this could lead to some disruption. Rain will ease later on Friday, but will continue on and off into Saturday. However, by then intensity will be lower.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 03:00 on Fri, 17th Jul 2015 until 15:00 on Fri, 17th Jul 2015

Rain will turn heavy at times form the early hours of Friday. Given the pre-existing ground saturation, the public should aware of the risk of localised flooding.
